

“No matter how good the intentions, how good the trainer, how good the equipment or health care or environment—if the foundation is not solid, nothing else is going to be quite right.”

Scott's exceptionally quiet, gentle, and straightforward training style has proven to be very effective with all types and ages of horses. He does not use shortcuts, gimmicky equipment, or "ten easy steps." While never utilizing force or fear, these common-sense methods will help the rider achieve partnership with his or her horse using the smallest of efforts based on the concepts of feel, timing, balance, release, and reward.

The ultimate goal is to produce a truly versatile horse—one that can hold down a "real" job on a farm or ranch, compete at the big events or on the weekends, and be steady and reliable for the kids after school.

Born into a legacy of horsemanship, Scott's philosophy on raising cattle and horses is deeply rooted in his family's more than 120 years of experience as ranchers in Nebraska. His current stallion, Lil Wildcat, is on the leading sires list for reined cowhorses. In addition to producing champions in cutting, reining, and reined cowhorse—plus many great ranch horses—Scott's horses have earned a reputation as quiet, calm horses that take care of their riders.

Scott's work is heavily influenced by Tom and Bill Dorrance, Ray Hunt, and Buck Brannaman, who may be called practitioners of foundation horsemanship, vaquero horsemanship, or, more loosely, natural horsemanship.
